Jackie Paint burning flame explores the theme of an artist losing their passion. It depicts a flame dying out, symbolizing the diminishing enthusiasm an artist feels for their work. This imagery represents the struggle many artists experience. The relentless demand for creativity, originality, and innovation can lead to a waning passion, causing the once burning vibrant flame of enthusiasm to slowly die out...

I decided to draw a scene from hazbin hotel episode 6 called Welcome to Heaven because it shows itself has been great unique characters vibrant colors, and intricate storytelling, charlie goes with Vaggie through the pearly gates to speak to the head seraphim and convinces them of her rehabilitation plan, n the end Charlie found out vaggie used to be angel killing sinners in hell. Drawing Episode 6 was particularly enjoyable due to the emotions displayed by the characters throughout the episode. I wanted to give something back to the Hazbin Hotel community by sharing my artwork, creating this art piece way for me to connect with others share my love for the Hazbin Hotel.

Jackie, drawing inspiration from Viviezpop's recently released prime series Hazbin Hotel and the YouTube series Helluva Boss, has started creating characters for her future webtoon comics based on Philippine mythical creatures. Her ongoing work revolves around the story of a Filipina girl named Lily, who finds herself in an upside-down world beneath our own. Choosing to explore this strange place, Lily encounters the 7 authorities, based on the 7 princes of hell, and seeks their help to return home.

Jackie's sketches and character designs breathe life into her narrative, and she weaves in real-life situations and experiences, such as discrimination, bullying, and family issues, into the story's fabric. Her work stands as a testament to her personal experiences and her vibrant imagination.
